

SPRING PARK NURSERY

Dear gardening friends,

Welcome to our 2023 Winter Rose Catalogue for dormant bare rooted plants. Whether you are a new customer, a loyal supporter, or a friend from afar, we extend a warm welcome to you all.

Over the last year, we have been thrilled to welcome back gardeners in the wake of the COVID-19 pandemic. After a prolonged period of uncertainty and isolation, it is great to see everyone rediscovering the joys of getting out and about, planning their gardens, and making magic.

We had a long and sometimes dreary winter here, seemingly lasting for 8 months and skipping spring entirely. Despite the patchy weather over the past year though, we had the pleasure of hosting many gardening groups for talks and were pleased to see the return of large gardening events. Of particular note was the Creswick Garden Lovers' Weekend, returning in 2022 after a COVID-hiatus. This event is a highlight of the gardening calendar in our region, and brings many people to our beautiful area.

Speaking of events, we are excited to announce that we are celebrating our 30th anniversary this year. We look forward to marking this milestone with all of you in the latter half of 2023. Stay tuned for more details!

This year we are offering some wonderful new release roses and are excited to see what you will create with them. These include the stunning Gold Pierre de Ronsard, a debut range of roses from Italian breeders Rose Barni, and two releases from the late great Australian breeder Bruce Brundrett.

Thank you for your continued support and enthusiasm. We look forward to seeing you at the nursery soon and hope that you enjoy this latest winter rose catalogue.

Rose Cultural Notes

Situation

Roses grow best in a sunny, well-drained position, needing at least 5 hours of sunshine a day to perform their best. They can also be grown very well when shaded for part of the day, but they will have fewer blooms. If the plant remains shaded and wet for long periods it will be more susceptible to fungal diseases. The planting location should have plenty of air movement to help prevent mildew, but some shelter from strong wind is preferred.

Soil

Roses prefer to be grown in a medium to heavy loam about 35 cm deep with a good clay subsoil. Clay soils can be improved by adding lots of organic matter such as well rotted manure. Gypsum can also be added to break up the clay before planting. Plants will grow in any type of soil but the more sandy the soil, the less water and nutrients will be retained and should be replaced regularly. Organic type fertilisers work best in a sandy soil situation.

Step 1: Soak your rose in Seasol

Step 2: Select your planting site

Planting Bare Rooted Roses

After purchasing your roses you should aim to plant them as soon as possible. If you cannot plant them immediately, take care not to let the roots dry out. This is very important as if they become dry, the plants vigour and growth may be set back – or in the worst case die. Soaking in a bucket of water and a cap full of Seasol added for a few hours before planting is also a good idea, this just helps the plant get the best start.

Dig a hole large enough to accommodate the roots of the plant comfortably and the bud union (graft) is just above the ground level. Place a mound of soil in the middle of the hole and spread the roots out over the mound. Place a light coverage of soil over the roots. At this stage, we recommend that for each rose one dessert spoon full of Osmocote (8 to 9 month slow release fertiliser) be added. A good handful of Blood 'N' Bone can also be added to the remaining soil that is to be back filled into the hole. Tread the soil reasonably firmly, leaving a basin around the rose to help retain water, then water in thoroughly. If you like you can add Seasol or use the bucket of soaking water.

Standard roses are planted in the same way but with a stake placed in the centre of the hole for support first. Weeping roses are grown with a pole and a rose ring for extra support.

Rock dust is a natural fertiliser product that can be added to your soil while planting to help with soil improvement.

Do not add other manure that is high in nitrogen (N), such as Dynamic Lifter, as this can burn the roots.

Step 3: Dig your hole with mound in the middle and rose graft above the soil surface

Step 4: Apply slow release fertiliser and rock dust to surrounding soil

Step 5: Back fill soil Step 6: Water in well

Planting Potted Roses

Potted roses can be purchased and planted at any time throughout the year. It is important to avoid disturbing the roots when removing the plant from the pot, as this can cause a severe setback to the plant. Dig a hole, twice the size of the pot so that the bud union is 50mm above the soil surface. Add some slow release fertiliser to the soil, then place the rose in the hole and fill with soil. Water in well and finish off with a layer of mulch.

Step 1: Select your site for your potted rose to be planted
Step 2: Dig hole twice as large as the pot

Step 3: Apply fertiliser to soil Step 4: Place rose in the hole, backfill and water in well.

Step 5: Mulch your newly planted rose.

Feeding

Roses are voracious feeders and for the best growth it is recommended that they be fed every 6-8 weeks during the growing season. Vary the types of fertilisers at each application such as Blood and Bone, Organic Rose Foods, Liquid Flower and Fruit, or a Complete Rose Food, etc. In the spring we recommend that a top dressing of a complete fertiliser be worked into the soil. A good rule is to feed plants at the start of spring, summer and autumn.

For newly planted bare rooted roses it is recommended that you don't use pelletised animal manure for at least a few months, as the fresh new roots can be burnt and set the plant back. Water all fertilisers in well so that your plant will get the benefit and be able to absorb the fertiliser.

Black Spot and Powdery Mildew

Fungal problems mainly occur during spring and autumn, or when the weather is humid. They do not generally hurt the plant, but are unsightly.

Black spot is a scattering of dark blotches on the leaves. Eventually leaves turn yellow and drop off. Powdery mildew is a creamy white mould, which attacks the flower stems or leaves and buds of flowers, appearing as white blotches on the leaves. The occurrence of both diseases is weather related. Black spot thrives in humid, warm conditions. Powdery mildew usually occurs in the spring and autumn, with mild days and cool moist nights.

For the control of these diseases, spray with Triforine or any good black spot spray. Use these preventative sprays every 7 to 14 days during spring. Lime sulphur can be sprayed during winter dormancy as indicated on the bottle. This will kill the fungal spores that lead to disease and give your rose a fresh start in spring.

Postal Orders

Packaging and Dispatch

Rose plants are shipped during July and August. All plants are wrapped in damp paper and the roots are sealed to maintain moisture. They are then packaged in cardboard cartons and sent via Australia Post. Roses transport extremely well. When your roses arrive, undo and place them in a bucket of water for a few hours to rehydrate the roots and reduce the stress on the plant before planting. Do not allow plants to dry out. To reduce stress on new plants, make sure to give them a thorough watering when you have planted them.

Collecting Your Order From the Nursery

Your order can be collected from the nursery 7 days a week from 9am to 5.30pm during June, July and August. We will contact you when your order is ready for collection. Please call us before you collect.
